September 18, 2008 (BOSTON, MA) Boston, MA based pop-rock singer/songwriter Chris Trapper is honored to have been selected to perform an original song at the United Nations Headquarters International Day for the Eradication of Poverty, Friday, October 17, 2008, in New York City.

The Human Rights and Dignity of People Living in Poverty commemoration will take place inside the United Nations Headquarters, Conference Room 2, from 1:15-2:45PM. Chris Trapper will be the only musical guest at the event and will perform one song, "Mission Of The Sun" written specifically for the occasion.

Invited speakers include people with experience of extreme poverty from Peru, the UK, and Kenya, the Ambassadors of the Missions of France and Burkina Faso to the United Nations, the Under Secretary General for Economic and Social Affairs, Mr Sha, and Ms. Magdalena Sep'iveda Carmona, UN Independent Expert on the question of Human Rights and Extreme Poverty.

The event is open to the public, by RSVP only.
Please send us an email if you would like to receive an invitation for the event.

About Chris Trapper:

The trick to the irresistibly organic, pure pop sound is that the music, and even the lead singer, take a back seat to the real star; the songs. Chris Trapper's ability to craft songs that are both elegant and accessible is evident on each CD in his deep Discography. His organic understanding of classic pop melody is infectious. There is a smart, honest quality to the lyrics that never panders. Chris Trapper's music can best be described as intricate power pop with a compelling knack for telling everyday stories.

NEW CD: 'Til The Last Leaf Falls is tentatively set for an October 14, 2008 national release and includes Chris' version of his original song 'This Time' which has the distinction of being the most popular song on the August Rush soundtrack (vocals: Jonathan Rhys Meyer, Warner Bros. Pictures) and is on its' way to Gold Record status.
